Unclear call text

A grant coach from a local University research services office calls you and needs your help. She has been contacted by researchers who are confused by unclear wording in a topic call text. You read the text carefully but cannot tell either what it means precisely.

What do you do?

Unhappy Ministry officer

A high-level officer from the Ministry of Education/Science has just arrived from a meeting in Brussels where she has seen a diagram showing that your country is doing lousy in H2020. At least a lot worse than your neighbouring country. Is this really true?

Where do you find the right information for her?

Info Day

You are organising an Info Day for potential applicants.

Where do you look for

- general information on H2020?
- future calls and topics?
- call conditions and criteria?
- other relevant information?

Lonely partner

A new client from a local SME has a brilliant idea for a collaboration project but does not know how to find good partners. He calls you and asks for help.

What do you do?

Hidden agendas

An experienced professor with several earlier EU grants is planning to apply again. She has already formed an excellent consortium and really knows what she is doing. But she now contacts you because she is convinced that there is a hidden agenda between the lines of the call text.

What do you do?

Beyond H2020

Your local research funding organisation is preparing its policies and actions for the future. They want to know about EU research policies, framework programs and future plans, to best align and complement research funding with national actions.

Where do you find the right information for them?
